The programme of the children's day service, which was given at the Union Station Methodist Church Sunday afternoon, was one of the most beautiful and original that has ever taken place in Richmond. The church, which was prettily decorated, was densely packed, and the entertainment provided was received with universal praise. The "floral anchor," surrounded by twenty little girls dressed in white, made a picture of rare beauty and sweetness.

The young choir, trained by Miss Viola Diacon, especially for this occasion, added much to the success of the "service." Perhaps the most enjoyable features were the singing of Master Rey Mounteastle and teh recital of Miss Lummie Cunningham. "Christ Our Anchor." Owing to the lateness of the hour, Dr. Young, of Centenary, postponed his address until some future time, merely stating that he should always regard this as one of the happiest and most pleasant hours of his life. He urged his hearers to carry to others the blessing, which he knew they had all received. In making a report of the work of the Sunday school. Mr. Charlie Brauer, the superintendent, stated that the beaufful programme which had delighted them all, programme which had delighted them all, was the work of a lady member of the which, and expressed thanks to her and alse to the ladies who trained the children to such a degree of excellence. Miss Lura Atkinson and Miss Viola Diacont have reason to be proud of the result of their labor. The programme is as follows: Chorus, "All Hail, All Hail," choir; prayer, John Hannon, D. D. song, "Heavenly Sunlight," school; address of welcome, Arthur Bates; exercise, "Floral Anchor," twenty girls; quartette, Misses Hogan and Diacont and Messers. Smithle and Beck; recitation, "Cur Misslons," Herbert Creekmore; solo, "He is Mine. I am His," Roy Mount-castle, recitation, "Christ, Our Anchor," the sidne. I am His," Roy Mount-castle, recitation, "Christ, Our Anchor," The solo by Miss Gornto was very fine.

The Moving Finger Writes

BY EDWARD FITZGERALD.

The verses we print this morning are from Flizgerald's incomparable translation of the Rubalyat of Omar Khayyam. The afth stanza takes its metaphor from the Persian game of pole. A distinct but has grown up around Flitzgerald's rendition of the philosophy of life taught by the Persian poet.

I sent my Soul through the invisible, Some letter of that after-life to spell: And by and by my Soul return'd to me And answor'd "I myself am Heav'n and Hell."

Heav'n but the vision of fulfill'd desire, And Hell the shadow of a soul on fire Cast on the darkness into which ourselves, So late emerged from, shall so soon expire.

We are no other than a moving row Of magic shadow-shapes that come and go Round with this sun-illumin'd lantern held In midnight by the Master of the Show;

Impotent pleces of the game He plays Upon this checker-board of nights and days: Hither and thither moves, and checks, and slays, And one by one back in the closet lays.

The ball no question makes of ayes and noes But right or left as strikes the Player goes And He that toss'd you down into the field. He knows about it all-he knows-HE knows!

The Moving Finger writes; and, having writ, Moves on: nor all your plety nor wit Shall lure it back to cancel half a line Nor all your tears wash out a word of it.

And that inverted bowl they call the Sky, Whereunder crawling coop'd we live and die, Lift not your hands to It for help-for It As impotently rolls as you or I.

KILLED IN POLO GAME.

Yale Freshman Dies From Accidental Blow of Princeton Man. A New York special of Sunday says:

Harry D. Eabcock, Jr., member of the freshman class of Yale, and a player on the pole team, died at his home here to day from the effects of an accidental blow on the head from a pole mallet in the hands of W. C. Devereux, a Princeton player.

the hands of W. C. Devereux, a Princeton player.
The accident occurred Saturday afternoon in Van Cortlandt Park, this city, in the last half of the first intercollegiate pole game ever played in this country.
According to he own verson of the affair, Babecek intentionally slipped from his pony to the ground after being struck, but later, partially recovering from the dizziness, he insisted upon returning to the game. Captain Baldwin, of Yale, overruled him and put another player in his place.

It was not until several hours after the accident that the serious nature of the injury became apparent. He died while surgeons were preparing for an operation.

LADIES TUCKED WAIST.

No. 6160.—Every day we find newer and prettier styles of the indispensable shirt waist, and suitable to the season is the advance style shown here. For the woman who has grown tired of heavy linen waists, with tailored strappings and stitchings, this will be a pleasant surprise, for it is just what is needed for the thick mercerized cotton waists that will not admit of trimming. The mode is sultable, however, to almost any material, as the tucks are very small, but the effect most charming.

The tiny graduated tucks in the waist are in sunburst effect, and the same idea is carried out in the sleeves. The pattern also includes the fanciful little stock that is shown in the illustration.

Cheviot, mercetized, cotton stuffs, silk or veiling will develop satisfactorily.

Material required for medium size, three and a half vards, thirty-six inches wide.

KILLED THE MAN WHO SHOT AT HIS FATHER

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.) NEW YORK, May 23 .- Antone Martin well to do, was shot and killed by Charles Vastel, nineteen, at the latter's home in Plainfield. Martin first had shot at Vastel's father. The boy wrested a revolver from his parent's hand and sent three buliets into Martin's body. The boy placed the revolver on a shelf and left the house. He has not been seen since, although the police have been searching for him. The trouble grew out of a five hundred dollar loan which Mortin had made the elder Vastel. Payment was not due until next month, but Martin had asked for the money. Martin had made a great deal of money in local real estate transactions. He leaves a widow and seven children.

"Yes," answered Durnovo, "she is a good cook—if she is notlying else."

It did not sound as if further inquiries would be welcome, and so the subject was dropped with a silent tribute to the culinary powers of Durnovo's house-keeper at the Msala Station.

The woman had only appeared for a moment, bringing in some dishes for Juseph—a tall, stately woman, with great dark eyes, in which the patience of motherhood had succeeded to the soft fire of West-Indian love and youth. She had the graceful, slow carriage of the Creole, although her skin was darker than that of those dangerous sirens. That Spanish blood ren in her veins could be seen by the intelligence of her eyes; for there is an intelligence of her eyes; for there is an intelligence of her future, for their incorrigible leisureliness prevents the present; in the men it seems to refer to the past or the future, for their powers, in the women it belongs essentially to the present; for there is no time like the present for love and other things.

"They call me," she had said to Jack Meredith in her soft mumbled English, a fortnight earlier—whey call me Marie."

Joseph called her "Missis," with a sort of friendliness in his voice, which never rose to badinage nor descended to familiarity.
"Seems to be a sound of the control of the uncommon kindy to their interests of yours."

They were washing up together after dinner in a part of the garden which was used for a scullery, and Joseph was enjoying a postprandial pipe.

"Yes," she said, simply, following the direction of Joseph's glance. Jack Meredith was engaged in teaching Epaminonidas the intellectual game of bowls with a rounded pebble and a beer bottle. Nestons, whose person seemed more distended than usual, stood gravely by, engaged in dental endeavors on a cork, while Xantippe joined noisly in the game. Their lack of dress was essentially mative to the country, while their mother affected a simple European style of costume.

Ambiguity is one of those intangible nothings that get into the atmosphere and have a trick of remaining there. Marie seemed in some subtle way to pervade the atmosphere of Msala. It would seem that Guy Oscard, in his thick-headed way, was conscious of this mystery in the air; for he had not been two hours in Msala before he asked. "Who is that woman?" and received the reply which has been recorded.

After dinner they had passed out onto the little terrace overlooking the river, and it was that the great Simiacine scheme was pieced together. It was here, beneath the vast palm-tree that stood like two beacons towering over the surrounding forest, that three men desilberately staked their own lives and the lives of others against a fortune. Nature has a atrange way of hiding her gifts. Many of the most precious have lain unheeded for hundreds of years in barren plains, on inaccessible mountains, or beneath the wave, while others are thrown at the feet of savages who know no use for them.
